BULL PANIC IN WHEAT IN ST. LOUIS AND NEW YORK.

STRONG ADVANCE IN MAY WHEAT.

Heavy Orders Received by Local Great Excitement Reigned in Brokers Push Price to 911-2c and Break Records.

BULLS PREDICT 75-CENT CORN. ST. LOUIS PRICES ALWAYS LED.

Highest Price Paid for Wheat Option Since Joseph Leiter's Unsuccessful Effort to Corner the Market.

St. Louis was the strongest and most excited grain market in the United States yesterday. Almost entirely on the basis of orders received by local brokers May wheat advanced to 91% cents, the highest price paid for the option since 1898, when Joseph Leiter made an unsuccessful attempt to corner the breadstuffs of the country. As in the case of the last buige, which carried December wheat over the 80-cent mark, the moving cause of the advance was heavy speculation by farmers in the southern and southwestern territory tributary to St. Louis. Men who usually make their money by tilling the soil and disposing of their product to city traders are becoming more and more firmly convinced that, in the face of a short crop, they can profit only by meeting the city farmer on his own ground and sharing his profits resulting from the steady appreciation of options, When local commission house operators reached their offices yesterday they found their desks loaded down with buying orders from country customers. The number of those who wished to sell was so small as have practically no effect on the speculative situation.
